WEATHER CHART

WHERE IS COSTA RICA?

Costa Rica is a small Latin American country situated in Central America and not in South America as many people seem to believe! Costa Rica is bordered by Nicaragua, Panama, the Pacific Ocean and the Caribbean Sea. While Costa Rica has more than 1200 km of coastline, its narrowest point from the Caribbean coast to the Pacific coast only measures 120 km! Do not be fooled, Costa Rica may be a small country, but it is very diverse in terms of relief so it is not that easy and quick to get from one point to another.

COSTA RICA'S HIGHLIGHTS

Arenal. Its perfect conical shape made it the most iconic volcano of Costa Rica. The lush vegetation that grows on its fertile plains have turned this area of Costa Rica into one of the most visited places in the country and there are a number of reasons why: great hiking trails, pristine rivers, hidden waterfalls and natural hot springs.

Tortuguero. This small fishing village situated at the North Caribbean coast of the country is only accessible by boat or by plane. Getting there is a wonderful experience itself. By boat, you get to travel a few hours surrounded by deep green jungles and you can observe countless wild animals on the way. The heat, the humidity and the sounds of the jungle will leave you speechless. By plane, you get to see the jungle and its numerous water canals from up in the air; an unforgettable experience. This place is often called the small "Amazonas". The beaches of Tortuguero are famous worldwide for turtles egg-laying. Depending on the season you visit this natural paradise, you might have the chance to witness this incredible event.

Corcovado: Where the wild things are! This area is one of the most biodiverse places on earth. It is teeming with life. Many scientists visit the area and countless new plants, trees, insects, reptiles and animal species are discovered each year. This place is relatively hard to get to as it is only accessible by boat or by plane. If you fancy exploring, pay a visit to the sumptuous Corcovado National Park. The park itself contains 2,5% of the biodiversity of the country. You should know that it can only be visited with a professional guide, but believe me it is worth it because you would not like to get lost and have to spend the night in this deep impenetrable jungle.

Sarapiquí. The rainforest of Sarapiquí is easily accessible from the capital city and can be reached in only two hours and a half and yet the climate and the landscape are totally different. It is a lovely rural area with small villages nestled in the rainforest. There are many amazing private reserves that can be visited and that offer interesting visits on different themes such as frogs of Costa Rica, nightwalks, or chocolate making.

The Central Valley of Costa Rica is the most densely populated area of the country and offers a lot of interesting opportunities to get an insight into the Costa Rican culture and its rich traditions. The cities of San José, Heredia, Alajuela and Cartago are very lively. There is always something happening and there are many different museums that are really worth a visit like the Gold Museum in San José. The Central Valley is also home to numerous volcanoes (Poas, Turrialba and Irazú) and to the beautiful Orosi Valley.

Costa Rica makes up only about 0.1% of the world's landmass, but it contains 5% of the world's biodiversity. Around 25% of the country's land area is in protected national parks and protected areas, being the largest percentage of protected areas in the world.

Manuel Antonio is the most popular national park of Costa Rica. The scenery is splendid and its beautiful pristine white beaches are ideal to take a rest after having walked all the trails the park has to offer. This park is often considered as “the” place to see sloths as quite a lot of them live up in the tall trees of the park and are easily observable with a good pair of binoculars. You can also spot three different types of monkeys, wild deers, lots of different colorful bird species and beautiful black and green iguanas.

The Celeste River. The majestic deep blue Celeste river will enchant you. The color between the green lush rainforest that borders the river and the deep blue almost fluorescent water is striking.

The Rincon de la Vieja volcano. This fascinating volcano is situated in North Guanacaste. Nature at its best: great hiking trails, numerous rivers and natural hot and cold pools, mud volcanoes... Being not as crowded as other volcanoes of Costa Rica, due to its location, you can enjoy some of the activities offered there all by yourself!

Puerto Viejo de Limón: Reggae, crystal clear water, sandy beaches and palm trees. Some might call it heaven but it is locally known as South Caribbean Costa Rica. Puerto Viejo is home to the one and only sloth refuge in the country. You might want to pop by if you have missed your chance to see one of these cuties in the wild.

Jaco: A surfing and party heaven! If you are into party and beach holidays, you should not miss Jaco beach. It is frequently visited by both locals and foreigners all year long and its waves are ideal to start your amateur surfing career.

Monteverde. The cloudy and mysterious Monteverde cloud forest is a must see while in Costa Rica. This mystical cloud forest is a very interesting biodiversity reserve. The quetzal, the most iconic bird of Costa Rica lives in the few cloud forests of the country. If you are patient enough, your chances to spot one here are relatively high. The countless epiphyte plants and the invasive moss that cover the trees of this amazing rainforest will make you feel like you are entering a long-lost world in which Mother Nature only rules.

La Zona de los Santos. A mountainous zone covered with coffee plantations. The best coffees of Costa Rica are produced in this region. The small villages of la Zona de Los Santos “saints” are tranquil and colourful. A beautiful rural area that contrasts with the rest of Costa Rica’s.

Visiting indigenous communities. Costa Rica is home to numerous indigenous communities that have been struggling daily to protect their own languages, cultures and traditions ever since the Spanish settled in the country. Most of the Costa Rican indigenous communities now live in protected reserve as a result of a 1977 government law aimed at preserving their land and culture. Most of the reserves can be visited but most of the time you have to go with a guide to show you around.

Rafting over the Pacuare River. The Pacuare river is often considered as one of the best rivers in the world for white-water Rafting. This is a great experience to enjoy the stunning views of the surrounding lush rainforest.

The Nicoya Peninsula: Surf, pristine beaches and yoga. The Nicoya Peninsula offers some of the most beautiful beaches of the country. Some of them are very popular surfing destinations, others are still very natural and untouched because of their secluded locations. Nicoya is famous for being a “blue zone” which means that people who live in this area of Costa Rica usually live longer than the rest of Costa Ricans and even humans in general! Their healthy stress-free lifestyle may be the clue to this miracle.

Uvita: white sandy beaches, wild waterfalls hidden in the jungle, snorkelling, whale watching and surfing. These are the most popular activities that you can do in this paradise located at the South Pacific of Costa Rica. The ideal location for a less crowded and laid-back beach holiday in Costa Rica.

Volcanoes. Costa Rica is part of the Pacific Ring of Fire. It is a very volcanic country and over 200 volcanic formations have been identified on its territory. Less than a dozen of them are considered as active volcanoes. The most visited volcanoes of the country (and also the most impressive ones) are the Poas, Arenal, Irazú, Turrialba, Miravalles, Tenorio, Barva, Rincón de la Vieja and the Orosi volcano.

Responsible Travel

Be part of our sustainable model

OUR COMMITMENT TO SUSTAINABLE TOURISM

If you are browsing through our manual, it means you have decided to come to Costa Rica or perhaps you have already visited Costa Rica and you loved it so much that you want to come back.

Costa Rica's green and peaceful reputation probably brought you to our website and influenced your decision to visit this country or at least to investigate about it. Let us tell you something, you have not been fooled! Costa Rica is an absolute paradise for nature, beach and adventure lovers and we want it to stay like that. That is why our company is committed to promote sustainable tourism practices.

Zero impact travel does not exist. In fact, there is an impact in every action one decides to take, either a positive or a negative impact. That's just the way it is. What we strive hard to do is to offer responsible tourism options to people like us, who are conscious of the ecological, social and cultural imprint of travel and who believe that small actions can make a big difference. We take our mission to make you discover our country very seriously and we always take in consideration the social and environmental impact of the activities we line up for you.

CST - Certification for Sustainable Tourism in Costa Rica

The prestigious Certificate for Sustainable Tourism is a program created by the Costa Rican Tourism Board to categorize and differentiate tourism companies according to the degree to which their operations approach a model of sustainability in the management of natural, cultural and social resources. For more information on this certificate, you can visit the official website www.turismo-sostenible.co.cr

The program awards business with one to five leaves.

GWA has been awarded with 4 leaves and we are working hard to get our fifth leave, the highest certification of the program.

WE ARE ALSO VERY PROUD TO SUPPORT VARIOUS PROJECTS AND NGOS SUCH AS THE FOLLOWING ONES:

FUNIPAR

This organisation promotes the education and the personal development of young adults who suffer from mental retardation. Their objective is to encourage their social integration within the society by making them participate in various occupational workshops (cooking classes, sports, arts etc.) and helping them find what they are good at..

VACACIONES CON FAMILIAS CAMPESINAS

We support this local project that aims to help families living from farming and agriculture by giving them another source of income generated by rural tourism activities.

HOW CAN I BE A RESPONSIBLE TRAVELLER?

If you are preoccupied with your social and ecological imprint on the places you visit, you should try to follow these simple steps to travel more "responsibly".

- Use water sparingly. Keep your showers short!
- Save energy. Do not leave your room AC / fan on while you are not there.
- Always travel with a reusable water bottle. In Costa Rica, the water is drinkable everywhere.
- Say no to straws!
- Try to use local public transport or shared transport to travel from one place to another.
- Don't litter. Try to reuse and recycle. Most hotels, restaurant and public beaches offer the opportunity to recycle.
- Try to buy locally made souvenirs and not cheap "Costa Rican" key rings shipped from China.
- If you bargain, do it wisely and respectfully.
- Don't pick up and take home natural resources such as stones, shells, plants etc.
- Try to choose eco-friendly restaurants and hotels.
- Respect the local culture and try to understand it. Be open and don't judge.
- Eat locally grown and processed food.
- When hiking, stay on the trails in order not to interfere too much with the nature around you.
- Don't feed wild animals.
- Take your own reusable bag when you go grocery shopping.
- Don't buy anything made from endangered plants or animals.
- Try to learn a few words and sentences in Spanish.
- When snorkelling, don't touch marine wildlife.

Spread the word between other travellers.
There are many more small things that can be done to reduce your impact while traveling and also at home. You will soon find out that when you start doing some of them, the rest of them will come naturally and many more as you will start to become more conscious of your environmental and social impact.
